Draft Age Limit May Be Lowered From 20 to 18

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP)—A proposal to lower the minimum age for compulsory service in the armed forces to 18, and possibly 18 years, will be put before congress soon, a usually informed source reported today.

Great Throng Condemns Axis In Mexico City

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—(P)—From President to peasant, thousands of Mexicans demonstrated against the Axis today at a huge meeting in the capital's great central plaza in solemn homage to 21 men lost in Axis submarine attacks on two Mexican tankers. With Mexico on the verge of declaring war on the Axis, German, Italian and Japanese property in the capital was being guarded by 800 police on emergency duty. Two hundred other police were stationed in the vicinity of the plaza to maintain order.

The crowd cheered as President Manuel Ávila Camacho appeared on the central balcony of the national palace. The cabinet, members of the congress, and labor and peasant leaders accompanied the chief executive.

The 22 survivors of the tanker Ptgero del Llano, sunk off Miami Beach, Fla., on May 13, were given places of honor while the body of one of the 14 men lost in that sinking, Rodolfo Chaco, lay in state below the central balcony. Seven men were killed in the torpedo attack on the second tanker, the Faja de Oro, off Cuba last Wednesday.

The list of the dead was read with the announcement "died in line of duty" after each name. Then a single bugle sounded taps as the throng stood silent and bareheaded.

Mexico rapidly is moving toward a full war footing. The congress is expected to be called into special session this week to declare war formally and all property of the enemy nations is expected to be seized.

Germany Unable To Meet Cry For More Output, Experts Say
(Editor's Note: The terrific impact of the war on Germany's production machinery is told in the following dispatch by Edwin Shanke, a member of the former World and Associated Press Bureau in Berlin, who recently reached Lisbon, Portugal, with other American newspapermen and diplomats after five months of internment in Germany.)

German economist said. "If the manufacture of armaments is expected to be increased despite such a situation, then the job seems to be one of making the impossible possible."

The Nazi drive to intensify production has been marked by the following measures:

1. Extreme exploitation of all labor reserves including those of the occupied countries.
2. Closing of more factories unnecessary in the war effort.
3. Concentration and rationalization of war production in selected factories.
4. More restrictions on civilian goods.
5. Improved organization within factories.
6. The marshaling of propaganda machines to force people to new efforts and the use of the entire Nazi party machinery to locate and draft every person capable of working who is not efficiently employed.

The objective in general is a greater saving in labor, raw material, transport and energy. The gaps in Germany's raw material supply virtually are the same today—and as serious—as at the start of the war.

Her ersatz program under the four-year plan has not found any replacement for vital metals such as copper, tin, tungsten, manganese and chrome needed to harden steel, leather, lumber, drugs, and textiles.

The fat shortages remain a headache. Petroleum products, high-speed lubricants and rubber are inadequate.

Germany's tremendous plan for ersatz products so far has kept the air force supplied with fuel and the motorized army equipped with tires.

Coal, of which the Germans have plenty, is the base for manufacturing synthetic gasoline and artificial rubber.

Four tons of coal are required to produce one ton of synthetic gasoline.

Germany's newest plants enable her to produce, it is reliably estimated.

REDS BREAK UP NAZI ATTACKS, RESUME ADVANCE ON KHARKOV

Fierce Defense Against Tanks Made to South

MOSCOW, May 25 (Monday)—(P)—Marshal Timoshenko's armies of the Ukraine have wrested the initiative from the Germans on the Kharkov front and again are advancing, while in the Izium-Barvenkova sector to the south fierce defensive battles are being waged against Nazi tank and infantry attacks, the Russians announced at midnight.

Resumption of the advance upon the great industrial city of Kharkov was announced in the Soviet midnight communiqué following a temporary halt in which the Germans threw huge forces of men and machines into a mighty counterattack.

In the Izium-Barvenkova sector the Russians said their forces were inflicting enormous losses upon German infantry and tank units trying desperately to flank the Russians' Kharkov wedge. Frontline dispatches said the Ukrainian hills in that area were strewn with mounds of Nazi dead.

"Heavy Fascist Losses."

The Soviet communiqué gave this brief picture of the fighting on the southern front:

"During May 24 our troops in the Kharkov direction waged offensive battles and advanced."

"In the Izium-Barvenkova direction our troops conducted fierce defensive battles against enemy tanks and infantry. In the course of these battles German Fascist troops suffered heavy losses."

The Russians reported destruction or damaging of 75 German tanks, 40 of them in two days of fighting on the Izium-Barvenkova front and 35 by Soviet planes in various sectors on Saturday.

The communiqué listed 24 German planes destroyed Saturday to 11 Russian losses.

110 Tanks Disabled.

On one sector of the Kharkov front the communiqué said:

"Soviet force on the same day smashed a German attack and occupied an important populated place. In this engagement more than 400 German dead were reported left on the battlefield."

Elsewhere on the front the Russians said there had been no important action. The Soviet drive on Kharkov is now in its 14th day.

A Pravda war correspondent reported in an eyewitness account that in a three-day battle before the city the Russians knocked out 110 of 150 tanks thrown into a massive charge by the Germans.

"This fierce combat ended in a brilliant victory for Soviet artillery," he wrote. "They burned down and disabled about 100 tanks. In addition 10 more tanks were put out of action by anti-tank rifles and reduced to infernos with incendiary bottles."

Another frontline dispatch said the Soviet air force was "mercilessly battering enemy concentrations as well as his airbases."

Caucasus Lines Bolstered.

Now that the Russians have withdrawn from the Kerch peninsula, London reports said the Russians were heavily re-inforcing defenses on the Caucasus shore, just across the narrow strait from the peninsula which forms the eastern tip of the Crimea.

The Soviet Black Sea fleet was pictured as the biggest obstacle to any attempt by Hitler to jump the Kerch strait to get at the oil treasure of the Caucasus.

Dispatches yesterday from the Izium-Barvenkova front said that

53 Reported Saved From U. S. Warship

BUENOS AIRES, May 24.—(P)—The State Merchant Fleet said today the small Argentine steamer Rio Igazu had picked up 53 persons at sea and newspaper reports declared the rescued were sailors from a United States warship of unsteady size.

Merchant Fleet officials declined to say what sort of ship the survivors came from.

They told of the survivors in response to inquiries made after the Italians had renewed their claims to having sunk a United States battleship with a submarine in the Atlantic off Brazil.

The German radio, quoting an official Italian announcement Sunday, said the Argentine ship had picked up 55 survivors from the battleship.

Two Lifeboats Reported.

The newspaper Noticias Graficas, quoting a merchant fleet source, said the Rio Igazu two or three days ago picked up two lifeboat loads of sailors from a North American warship but could not say whether it was a battleship, cruiser or destroyer.

The State Merchant Fleet made public part of the text of a wireless report from the captain of the Rio Igazu, saying:

"I picked up 53 survivors on the high seas."

Fleet headquarters emphasized that it would not make public any information on the date or location of the rescue or other details because of "war conditions."

The Rio Igazu left New York May 9 and maritime sources figured it would now be between Bahia and Rio de Janeiro. It is due here June 1 or 2.

"Of Maryland Class."

The Italians announced in a special communiqué Friday that the submarine Barbarigo had sunk an American battleship of the "Maryland class" of 31,800 to 32,900 tons. (There has been no confirmation of this enemy claim from any other source.)

The Italian announcement said the battleship was hit by two torpedoes just off the bulge of the Brazilian coast.

Implying that the submarine remained near enough to the surface to observe the results, the Fascists asserted the battleship's destroyer escort failed to "react" to the torpedoing.

It was learned that the Rio Igazu, now believed to be somewhere off Recife, Brazil, was scheduled to come direct to Buenos Aires but informed sources said it might stop at the nearby Brazilian port to land the survivors.

The 2,177-ton rescue vessel, the former Danish Bretagne which was recently acquired by the State Merchant Fleet, was considered too small to accommodate 53 extra persons aboard on a long trip.

The last public report on the Rio Igazu's movements was its arrival in New York last March 23.

Savage Chinese Battles End in Jap Victories

CHUNKING, China, May 24.—(P)—Japanese bombers based on Burma raided the heart of the important Burma Road city of Paoshan and other points in western Yunnan province today while, far to the east, Chinese and Japanese soldiers fought savagely in Chekiang province.

Chinese dispatches said eight bombers escorted by six fighters bombed Paoshan. The results of the raids there and in other Yunnan points were not stated in the reports.

Paoshan is the next objective of Japanese forces fighting on the Burma Road in Yunnan province. The Japanese columns in Chekiang province are aiming at Linhai, provisional capital of the province, and Lanchi, on the south side of Chientang river and only 12 miles northwest of Kinhu.

The bloody battles at three towns 25 to 35 miles northeast and east of Kinhu, where the armies last were reported locked in combat, all have ended in Japanese victories, a Chinese communiqué indicated.

It said "Japanese troops, which with reinforcements now number almost 100,000, have launched a ferocious drive in Kinhu from Tungyang, Yimu (Iwu) and Pukiang," all in the outer defense belt of the provincial seat.

The Chinese were battling desperately in front of Kinhu, the most important military, economic and communications center in eastern China remaining in Chinese hands. Japanese planes, covering the Japanese advance, were bombing Kinhu, already badly damaged, and other towns almost continuously.

Hot fighting also was in progress around Kienchi, 35 miles to the north of Kinhu.

On the Burma front, between the Mekong and Salween rivers, the Japanese also were admitted to have scored a success after many days of hard fighting in which casualties mounted on both sides. The communiqué said the Japanese had made "some progress," but made no mention of the Burma Road sector 250 miles to the north.

Chinese dispatches said Chinese troops carried out a series of attacks against Japanese points around Nanchang, occupied capital of Kiangsi, in the past few days. It was reported that heavy casualties were inflicted and sections of a highway and a railway were destroyed.

2 to 4 Sleeping Wings.

Each dormitory would be composed of two to four sleeping wings. Dining facilities would be located in a central building, which also would have a lounge, library and writing room, indoor games room and auditorium.

Each dormitory would have an infirmary, according to present designs.

The critical building materials situation was reflected in an announcement of the Federal Works Agency today that it had ordered nearly 200 items eliminated, so far as practicable, in the construction of public works projects. These include structural steel, aluminum, lead, tin and other metals, rubber and rubber products, cork, sewer and water pipes made of metal and various other items.

SPANIARDS BACK HOME.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, May 24.—(P)—Thirteen hundred members of Spain's Blue Legion, arriving from Germany's Russian front, crossed the French frontier into Spain today. They will be given a big reception at Madrid on Monday.

Dormitories Planned For Defense Workers

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(P)—Blocks of "duration dormitories," highly temporary in structure but affording essential accommodations, soon will begin to rise in crowded war work areas as an answer to critical building material shortages, the Federal Public Housing Authority disclosed today.

Meanwhile, John B. Blandford, national housing administrator, said he knew "of no plan to abandon any housing project already under construction."

One Washington quarter previously had expressed the view that housing of any permanent nature "is out," and that in addition to the construction of dormitories the government might have to turn to billeting of workers in private homes near defense plants.

Director Howard Strong, of the Housing Registration Division, said, however, enforced billeting would be done "only as a last resort."

Strong's division now operates offices in 305 congested war-work areas for the voluntary registration of spare rooms that can be used by workmen.

Plans Drawn Up.

Plans for the sprawling emergency dormitories were put on the drawing boards when shortages of essential materials began to slow down the construction of permanent family-unit dwellings and apartments.

The War Production Board recently "froze" all sales and deliveries of soft construction lumber by large producers for 60 days, except for delivery to the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission.

This later was relaxed partially to provide for some essential war housing.

To be located near the plants where the tenants work, the duration dormitories have been designed by a housing spokesman said to promote the workers' production efficiency, reduce the use of critical war materials and to help solve the transportation problem caused by restrictions on tires, gasoline and automobiles.

Dormitories would be provided for single men, for single women, and, in a few instances, for small families.

Each dormitory would be composed of two to four sleeping wings. Dining facilities would be located in a central building, which also would have a lounge, library and writing room, indoor games room and auditorium.

Each dormitory would have an infirmary, according to present designs.

Pennsylvania's Flood Dead List Mounts to 32

HONESDALE, Pa., May 24.—(P)—This debris-strewn area of eastern Pennsylvania counted at least 32 dead today and fears for the safety of scores of others rose in the wake of one of the most disastrous series of flash floods in the section's history.

Twenty-four victims have been found and identified in this mountain community of 5,687 which was literally split in half by a roaring wall of water from a mountain stream which struck early Saturday.

Eight other bodies within a 100-mile area have been recovered. But there still are many unaccounted for.

Some of the dead were found wedged in trees which had been submerged. One was lashed to a tree—the futile attempt of Miss Gertrude A. Baleser, 35, to save herself when the Lehigh river swept four cottages from Adams island near Allentown.

Throughout the stricken district the picture was the same—homes twisted from foundations, operations drastically curtailed at many industrial plants busy with war orders, thousands turning to emergency relief agencies for shelter and food, volunteers wading through mud and debris left by the receding waters in the search for bodies.

Torrential rains throughout the watersheds of the Susquehanna, Lehigh, Schuylkill and Lackawanna rivers started them climbing swiftly toward the banks late Friday.

But it was the rampaging mountain tributaries which did the heaviest damage. Coming up without warning the narrow hill channels molded them into walls which swept away virtually everything in the path.

John Barrymore Is Not Improving

HOLLYWOOD, May 24.—(P)—John Barrymore showed no improvement this morning in his fight against a complication of ailments.

The Hollywood Presbyterian hospital issued a morning bulletin saying the veteran actor "spent a restless night, but on the whole his condition is unchanged since yesterday." Earlier his physician, Dr. Hugo M. Kersten, said Barrymore's condition did not seem improved; that his temperature and respiration were unchanged from yesterday.

Sharks Tickled Her Feet, Says Gulf Ship Survivor, 11

MORGAN CITY, La., May 24.—(AP)—A brown-eyed, dimpled cheeked girl of 11 sat on the edge of her mother's hospital bed here today and calmly flipped her yo-yo as she told how seamen beat off sharks that tickled her feet while she rode a hatch in the Gulf of Mexico after Axis submarines torpedoed and sank the vessel she was aboard.

2 Army Planes Crash in Air; Pilots Saved

Machines Plummet 12,000 Feet as Fliers Use Parachutes.

TEANECK, N. J., May 24.—(AP)—Two Army planes crashed 12,000 feet over Teaneck today, the two aviators parachuted to safety and the pilotless aircraft plummeted into the very doorsteps of astounded residents.

Despite fire and falling plane parts no one was badly hurt.

The mid-air crash upset the morning calm of a pleasant May Sunday in this residential community of 27,000 persons six miles from the George Washington bridge and New York.

One plane sheared off the back roof of a garage and burst into flames; the other buried itself nose first in a dirt street of an exclusive area a mile away in full view of wide-eyed residents.

One pilot, Lieutenant M. M. Brown, of Louisville, Ky., came down into the softness of a swamp; his friend, Lieutenant Louis Bowen, of Champaign, Ill., settled on the front lawn of Earl Duncan's home off state highway 4 near Teaneck High school.

Lieutenant Burned In Air Crash Dies

ASHLAND, Ky., May 24.—(AP)—Lieutenant Virgil E. Holman, of Rochester, Mich., burned when his Army pursuit plane crashed and burst into flames near Greenup yesterday, died today in an Ashland hospital.

The crash occurred after both motors of the plane stalled while flying in a formation.

The ship sheared branches from a large elm tree and piled into a field a half mile from the Ohio river. Holman was unable to tell how he got clear of the burning wreckage.

Can You Expect an ECONOMICAL Administration ... from a Mayor who tried to saddle a $25,000,000.00 Bond Issue on Atlanta Taxpayers????

In his advertising, Hartsfield is promising to "operate your City upon a constructive and balanced budget." He doesn't promise to operate it on the same ECONOMICAL basis he did when he was Mayor before, because he, like everyone else, knows that his former administration was the most EXTRAVAGANT in Atlanta's history.

Hartsfield's idea of a "constructive and balanced budget" is probably to revive the infamous "Highway Authority" bill that he went over to the Capitol and lobbied to get through; a bill that would have taken control of Atlanta's highways, parks, bridges, valuable utility franchises away from Atlanta's city government and vested it in an APPOINTED board of five members from Fulton and DeKalb Counties. But—Atlanta taxpayers would have been privileged to bear the major part of repaying this $25,000,000.00 bond issue.

This bill was so detrimental to the best interests of Atlanta that the City Attorney wrote a letter to the Mayor and General Council, CONDEMNING this bill. Yet this is the same bill that Hartsfield helped to lobby through the Legislature. I am proud of the fact that I, and others, used our influence with the Governor to have it vetoed.

When I outline the program I will follow when elected, I don't use "weasel-words" like "constructive and balanced budget." I flatly promise an ECONOMICAL administration that will cut costs, prevent waste and save the taxpayers money! To substantiate this promise I offer my RECORD for economy in the City Electrical Department. In 1941, after ten years' service, my department was operated at a saving of $58,077.00 as compared with 1931, the year before I took office. You won't find many branches of the city, state or national government that are operated at LESS today than they were in 1931.

I ask your vote for Mayor on my record and experience in economically handling the affairs of Atlanta's City Government.

Japs Will Get More Bombing, Doolittle Says

Jap Pursuits 'Never Had a Chance,' He Reveals.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP)—Brigadier General James H. Doolittle promised today that "other Japanese and other German objectives" would be bombed in addition to Tokyo.

The leader of the spectacular air attack on the Japanese capital said in an Army Hour radio broadcast sponsored by the War Department that the raid was made possible by "the best planes in the world."

"The Japanese pursuit planes that came up after us never had a chance," he related.

Doolittle, speaking from the Pacific, said the excellence of American combat planes enabled their crews to devote their full attention to flying and executing missions.

Explaining that "we've told as much of the story as it's possible to tell right now," he disclosed no further details of the Tokyo exploit.

Blow at Japanese From China Foreseen

NEW YORK, May 24.—(P)—Captain Harold Sweet, veteran commercial pilot, who returned today from the Far East by Clipper, said he believed a blow would be made at Japan "through China and at Japanese shipping in the China sea" from air bases on the Chinese coast.

"I think the drive on China will dry up as soon as we begin sinking the Japanese boats in the China sea, which will be very soon," he asserted.

"I believe," he added, "that is why the Japs are so desperately trying to drive up into China through Lashio and along the coast."

Senior pilot of the Chinese National Aviation Corporation and now assigned to Pan-American Air Ferries, Captain Sweet asserted "the people of America don't need to be downhearted. But everyone must work 100 per cent together."

He said he believed a Japanese invasion of India or Australia was unlikely because the Japanese had over-extended themselves. He likened the Jap drive to "a skyrocket that has reached the top of its flight and will come down as fast as it went up."

Sweet said he thought Russia would release its army reserves in Siberia against the German lines when Russia was convinced that American airpower was strong enough to protect Russia in that area.

Reds Resume Kharkov Drive

The Germans' week-long diversion offensive there had been fought to a standstill and that in the ensuing fighting the enemy line had been rolled back a considerable distance.

These dispatches said the Russians, after waging a stubborn battle for days, struck sharply at two points along the threatened salient driven deep past Kharkov on the south, ejecting the Germans from the southern suburb of the city while crossing a river and occupying another village in the same sector.

Pitched Battle Raging.

In a more northerly sector where the Russians were pursuing their offensive toward Kharkov with diminished but continuing progress, a pitched battle was being fought with the Germans again resorting to employment of massed tank columns.

The Germans claimed a large Russian force was encircled in the Kharkov salient as the result of the German counterattack.

The dispatches indicated, however, that no decisive changes in position were now taking place, either on the northern or southern angles of the Kharkov front where the Red army launched the first major spring offensive May 12.

But the Russians appeared to be achieving one of their main objectives of bleeding the German reserves at points chosen by the Red army.

And Red Star claimed that the Red air force held the initiative generally all along the vast front, with Yak, Lagg and Mig fighters successfully opposing German efforts to gain air superiority.

Describing the recapture of the village on the Izyum-Barvenkova sector, where the Germans last week attempted a diversion attack to halt the Russians' Kharkov offensive, Red Star said an infantry battalion charged across a river barrier and rushed into the village streets.

Driven out by rifle and machine-gun fire, the Germans tried to flee up a near-by mountainside, but were mowed down in their flight. Gunfire from two big tanks then silenced mortars and machineguns in the last points of resistance in the village.

The Russians were said to have taken up favorable positions for battle on the far side of the river.

In the counterattack which drove the Germans from the southern suburb of a city in the same sector, a group of automatic riflemen and a battalion of infantry were said to have led the assault, hurling the Germans back some distance and leaving the surrounding hills dotted with heaps of German dead.

In the northern angle of the Kharkov wedge, the dispatches said, the Germans had found their recent operations with small tank groups ineffectual and had returned to massed armored attacks used in the earlier spring battles.

A strong German tank blow was administered at one point, but it had only "partial success," and no effect on the general situation, the dispatches said.

Grouping for gaps between Red army divisions with the object of hitting their flanks, German tanks filtered through one of these links with a regiment of infantry following close behind, but the Russian flanks were reinforced and the enemy driven out.

The dispatches told of two other tank wedges which were driven back by antitank artillery and infantry ambushes. All these probing attacks apparently were what the Germans referred to yesterday as their general counterattack all to halt the Russians' Kharkov offensive.

The German tactics of throwing their tank units into battle here and there, like a quarterback attempting to confuse his opponent, was taken by the Russian command as a sign of the weakening of the enemy's armored force.

23d Division Beaten.

During the first day of the Kharkov offensive, the dispatches said, only two or three German tanks appeared at various points. The second day, however, the Germans brought out 250 to smash at the line at a single point.

Then they resorted to using groups of only 40 to 60 at single points. Returning to mass tactics now, they were able to muster only 140 machines in the strongest tank group.

The 23d German tank division was reported completely defeated, while other machines which the Germans had intended to keep in reserve were said to be damaged, repaired or finally discarded.

While the bloody tug-of-war was unabated on the hot steps of the Ukraine, the Battle of Kerch in the Crimea ended with last night's announcement that the Russians had evacuated the peninsula under instructions of the high command.

Hundreds of Planes. Red Star, giving first details of that battle in which the Russians held out for two weeks against an immense superiority in numbers, indicated that a sudden massing of the German air force was largely responsible for the German success.

The Army organ said many hundreds of planes had been used by the Germans on a front of only 12 to 14 miles.

The paper said the German tactics were to sweep the skies with a multitude of their own planes, pinning down the land forces and blocking the opposing air forces.

Nevertheless, the Red air force was said to have hit back hard, raiding one airport in the Crimea where 100 German planes were based, burning out or damaging half of them.

The Red air force was said to have wrecked 20 Messerschmitts at another airfield near Kharkov, and to have struck from Sevastopol, the beleaguered Soviet naval base in the Crimea, destroying 11 and damaging 12 other German planes at another field.

Remove Teeth During Air Raid; You Might Swallow Them!

LANSING, Mich., May 24.—(AP)—In case of an air raid, take those false teeth from your mouth and put 'em where they will be good and safe.

That is the advice of Dr. Lloyd H. Gaston, deputy chief of the Emergency Medical Service Corps, who says the vacuum created by a bomb explosion easily could cause a victim to swallow a removable bridge. He warns further: "Larger restorations, such as partial dentures, may become potential secondary projectiles following a blow on the head."

Troops Repel Sham Invasion In New Jersey

Commandos 'Destroy' Buildings During 2-Hour Battle.

ALONG THE NEW JERSEY COAST, May 24.—(AP)—An invasion of the New Jersey shore by a theoretical enemy force operating in commando fashion was repelled by American troops today while thousands of shore residents were shunted off streets and into homes by 5,000 air raid war-dens and civil defense workers.

Superior American artillery fire and beach defenses, coupled with superior American automatic weapon fire, enabled defending forces to frustrate the invading groups in a two-and-a-half-hour battle, but not before the enemy had "destroyed" the Asbury Park convention hall, a theater, a large department store, an apartment building, while Fifth Columnists blew up a highway bridge.

All non-military traffic in the area was brought to an abrupt halt. Bus passengers and pedestrians were ordered into stores or other establishments at all points but one.

That spot was the Asbury Park boardwalk, where thousands of vacationists simply stood, sat or stared at the maneuvering forces.

There were so many at the scene and moving them would have been so difficult a problem the Army decided to declare the boardwalk a "dead area" and act as if there was nobody present.

The invasion came without warning or prior notice to any save the civil defense forces and high authorities.

Several ships offshore lent a realistic note to the invasion, although, of course, no invading troops tried to land and no shots were fired.

Southeast British Town Is Sharply Assaulted

A SOUTHEAST BRITISH COAST TOWN, Monday, May 25.—(P)—German planes made a sharp early morning attack here today, dropping bombs over a fairly large area. Residential property was damaged but casualties were light.

LONDON, May 24.—(P)—The RAF shot down two German fighter planes on a sweep over northern France early tonight, it was authoritatively learned. There were no British losses.

While the bloody tug-of-war was unabated on the hot steps of the Ukraine, the Battle of Kerch in the Crimea ended with last night's announcement that the Russians had evacuated the peninsula under instructions of the high command.

The Red air force was said to have wrecked 20 Messerschmitts at another airfield near Kharkov, and to have struck from Sevastopol, the beleaguered Soviet naval base in the Crimea, destroying 11 and damaging 12 other German planes at another field.

While the bloody tug-of-war was unabated on the hot steps of the Ukraine, the Battle of Kerch in the Crimea ended with last night's announcement that the Russians had evacuated the peninsula under instructions of the high command.

Hundreds of Planes. Red Star, giving first details of that battle in which the Russians held out for two weeks against an immense superiority in numbers, indicated that a sudden massing of the German air force was largely responsible for the German success.

The Army organ said many hundreds of planes had been used by the Germans on a front of only 12 to 14 miles.

The paper said the German tactics were to sweep the skies with a multitude of their own planes, pinning down the land forces and blocking the opposing air forces.

Nevertheless, the Red air force was said to have hit back hard, raiding one airport in the Crimea where 100 German planes were based, burning out or damaging half of them.

Dangerous Proposals

Randolph Paul, tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, has made several proposals in respect to taxation of universities, colleges, hospitals, churches and other institutions that depend for financial support upon private gifts. These proposals are intended for incorporation in the new tax bill now before the House Committee on Ways and Means and which the congress will soon consider and pass.

That these proposals are exceedingly dangerous is realized when it is explained they would drastically curtail the income of private educational and charitable institutions, at best, and at worst would force such institutions to close their doors.

Briefly, Mr. Paul proposes that tax exemption on contributions to charity, under the inheritance law, shall be limited to a specific percentage of the decedent's estate. Secondly, that any gift or endowment made by a person of age 65 or over be considered a gift made in contemplation of death. And, thirdly, that educational institutions be taxed on the income derived from sources not necessarily incident to their exempt activities.

Curtailling of the amounts which individuals may will to such institutions, as outright gifts or endowments, would inevitably result in a serious shortage of funds, in a short time. It would dangerously cripple all institutions thus supported and tend to bring about a situation in this country parallel to that in the dictatorships of Europe, where all education and charity is under rigid state control.

It is unbelievable that the United States government would wish to bring about such conditions here. If this proposed law had been in effect in years past, we should today have no Carnegie libraries, there could be no privately-supported universities or hospitals. Charity, which constitutes so powerful a factor in American life, would be crippled and throttled and even religion itself would see its freedom threatened.

We know the United States government does not intend anything which would cause so drastic a change in the American manner of life. We believe it is simply a failure to realize what is involved in the Paul proposals which have permitted them to receive any serious consideration.

Congress should make sure they are eliminated from the revenue bill before it is enacted into law. What small revenue they could produce is of no moment compared to the danger inherent in their enactment and enforcement.

Until quite recently, the committees on uses for the new leisure had thought of everything but war.

Can't This Wait?

There was an item in a departmental appropriations bill, passed by the senate, calling for $50,000 to build a barbed wire fence along the Mexican border west of El Paso, Texas. It was stated the fence would be 25 miles long, which brings the cost to $2,000 the mile.

Whether the fence is essential or not, that price seems high. It must be an elaborate and complicated sort of barbed wire fence to cost so much.

However, the nation is at war. Rulings from the priority board have prohibited wire fences around important war industrial plants. Because it takes steel to make wire and all the steel we have is needed for ships and tanks and guns and bullets.

We have got along rather well with Mexico for quite a number of years without any wire fence along the border. It would seem we could continue fenceless a little longer, until the war emergency is over.

Anyway, if, as stated, the fence is to keep out smugglers, why limit it to 25 miles? Can't they cross at some unfenced spot of the border? Or, can't a smuggler with initiative find some means of getting over or under any fence, even one that costs $2,000 a mile?

The Undefended Flank

The United States is at war on many fronts, against many enemies.

Not the least dangerous of these enemies is called inflation and the battle front is at home. It extends all over the United States, wherever money, currency of this nation, is found.

It is axiomatic in warfare that a line of defense is only as strong as its weakest sector.

When the Germans attacked France in 1940, they were able quickly to smash the vaunted Maginot line because it did not extend to the coast. By foolish ideas of isolationism and neutrality, there was no Maginot line across the border of Belgium.

The United States has set up only a partial defense against the dread economic foe, inflation. It has built a Maginot line across that portion of its defenses known as prices, by setting an arbitrary ceiling on the price that can be charged for practically all living essentials.

However, there is another sector of defense on which no Maginot line has been constructed. That is the sector known as wages. There we are depending, just as France depended, upon promises of neutrality and isolation, upon promises of voluntary stabilization of wages. Promises which, as in the case of France, prove of no value whatsoever when the enemy chooses to attack.

True, the War Labor Board has adopted a policy against any wage increases except in exceptional cases, in all cases brought before it for arbitration. But it has been shown that 80 per cent of wage increase requests, or demands, never reach the board for arbitration. They are settled between employer and employees, almost invariably by granting of the increases by the employer. Either because he considers this the quickest and easiest solution of his immediate problem, or because he is engaged in war work and it is easy to pass the burden of the higher wages on to the government in greater production costs and, thence, to the taxpayers. Again, government money is no one's money.

Something must be done, promptly, to close this glaring gap in the national defense against inflation. The President seems strangely reluctant to act, though he must have full realization of the situation and its danger. If he does not act, it is up to congress to protect the nation, by suitable legislation, against the inflation which is inevitable unless some protective steps are taken.

There are some isolated industries where wages are still criminally low. In the majority, however, rates of pay are high, certainly high enough to provide all the necessities of life under "price ceiling" regulations. And no man has the right to ask more than life's necessities in time of war.

The Canadian plan seeks to prevent increases of already high wages, but to allow adjustments where pay is far too low. It prohibits increases for any workers receiving more than $25 weekly, but allows increases for those getting less than this sum.

Some similar plan would seem most feasible for this country.

Certainly, something must be done; soon. If it is not all our price ceilings and other elaborate machinery to prevent inflation will be worse than useless. They will be wasted effort.

Once inflation starts, there is no stopping it short of national catastrophe which would mean starvation and untold suffering for millions.

2,300 New Homes

Two thousand new homes, each in approximately the $4,000 class as to cost, will be built within walking distance of the new Bell Bomber plant, near Marietta. With previous housing authorizations, this brings to 2,300 the total of approved homes to be built in the area.

Thus is visualized the complete new city, or town, which will come into being with the construction of the plant. So many homes constitute a larger community than many sizable Georgia towns.

Walking distance, according to government regulations, is anything not more than two miles. So many homes located in that distance of the plant will make, to all intents and purposes, a cohesive, separate community with the plant in its center.

Gradually Atlanta and this section of the state is learning just how vast a project this bomber plant will be, how vitally it will affect the lives of everyone here. Averaging five persons to the home—which is about correct—the plant will thus establish, at the city's door, a new community of between 11,000 and 12,000 inhabitants, in addition to a number at least equally as large who will work in the plant but live in Atlanta.

The economic impact of such an addition to the population within the Atlanta area cannot fail to vitally affect all business and public affairs. It behooves city and county officials, as well as private business, to make every possible preparation in advance of the start of operations at the new plant.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

RUSSELL REPUTATION WASHINGTON, May 24.—After warding off a five-day attack on the $680,000,000 Agricultural Department appropriation bill, Senator Russell has boosted his reputation as one of the most effective parliamentarians in the upper branch of congress.

For sheer tenacity and purpose and collaterally, the Georgia junior senator has no equal in the chamber. He gets things done. Seldom is he defeated.

Economy-minded senators, bent on reducing new war expenditures by some $2,000,000,000 annually, set upon the agricultural bill as fair game. Senator Russell, whose duty it was to pilot the bill through, beat off every attack. As finally passed, the measure was precisely as the appropriations committee had written it.

Not a single item was voted up or down from the committee recommendations, although a spirited battle went on over its provisions for five days.

It fell the lot of the Georgia senator to pilot the measure through because of his position as chairman of the agricultural subcommittee of the appropriations committee. As such, he presided over all of the preliminary hearings incident to the preparation of the bill. Naturally no other member of the senate was better informed on its contents than he.

When Senator Byrd, of Virginia, and Senator Taft, of Ohio, two of the economy specialists, sought to reduce individual items, he was on their necks with a flood of factual material that usually left them bereft of supporting argument. Each time they were voted down overwhelmingly. In not a single instance did the Georgia senator lose his point.

GROWN IN STATURE Senator Russell has grown in stature with the years. The training he had as a member of the state legislature, speaker of the house and then Governor before coming to Washington at the beginning of the Roosevelt administration, has served him in good stead. He did not have to go through that period of parliamentary training which holds many senators back on their initial appearance in the senate.

Now he is recognized as one of the most effective legislative leaders on the majority side, which boasts many good men. When he is assigned the task of putting a bill through he does it with a parliamentary rhythm that has charm. No one ever catches him napping. Taking his duties seriously, he sits at his post continually throughout the long day's session, eating his lunches on these days in the senate cloak room, where he is always on immediate call. No one slips anything over on him.

OFF-FLOOR WORK One of the most effective methods of the Russell technique, however, is man-to-man work behind the scenes. He rarely brings a proposition before offering it for formal action. He accomplishes this by button-holing recalcitrant members on and off the floor before they raise a question in debate. Often times much opposition is eliminated in this way which otherwise might precipitate a bitter fight.

It is the most effective way of getting things done. Senator Russell is one of its most adept followers. It explains much of his success in passing legislation where others fail. They wait until a senator has committed himself openly and can't retreat.

CONSULTS WITH F. D. R. President Roosevelt on many occasions has shown his appreciation of the Russell legislative procedure. Just before the agricultural bill got under way the first of this week, Mr. Roosevelt had the Georgia senator down to the White House, in company with Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, ironing out some of the controversial items. The result was that no dispute arose with the administration.

This is not the first time such White House meetings have taken place. He is one of the administration's most valuable consultants on pending legislation.

When attacks were made against the agricultural bill on the score that the department is a nondefense agency, Senator Russell was on hand with a ready answer.

TELLING ARGUMENT "I maintain," he said, "that the Department of Agriculture and its activities have a very direct relation to the national defense. The production of food and clothing to achieve the goals which have been fixed in the food-for-freedom program . . . is certainly a most important contribution to the winning of the war. Today we are shipping vast quantities of food and clothing materials not only to England, but through the icy waters of the Arctic ocean and the Barents sea to Russia. We are sending such materials to other places at which it is absolutely necessary that they be lodged if we are to carry on this fight against the Axis."

It is in a moment of such a nature that in a moment of hysteria to reduce expenses of this department so that its employees could not go out into the field and discharge the duties which congress has imposed upon them."

That brief statement was enough to win the day against the particular reduction sought by the economy-minded senators then. Afterward the senate voted down every proposal that was not approved by the Georgia senator.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

That Was A Fire.

It was on May 21, 1917, Atlanta suffered the worst loss by fire in her history. Anyway, the worst with the possible exception of the fire started by a fellow named Sherman.

Estimates of the property damage ranged from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 at the time. More than 50 residential blocks were completely wiped out. The miraculous thing was that, insofar as known, not a single person lost life in the conflagration. I say, insofar as known, for there were unverified rumors that several Negro children were burned. It was possible, but scarcely probable. No trace of bodies was ever found, anyway.

That day I was coming to the office, to go to work, with some other people in an automobile. We were driving in by way of Edgewood avenue. A few blocks this side of the bridge saw the fire to another, so fast a running man could scarcely keep up with the progress of the flames.

The Speed by Which It Spread.

The fire started somewhere near Decatur street and the wind blew it that way. That day I was coming to the office, to go to work, with some other people in an automobile. We were driving in by way of Edgewood avenue. A few blocks this side of the bridge saw the fire to another, so fast a running man could scarcely keep up with the progress of the flames.

We turned right down a street, not far from Boulevard, drove some three or four blocks and then turned east again. Driving about two blocks in that direction into the path of the fire. And when we got there the flames were already raging to our north. They swept through that fast.

I stood on one street for a moment or two, watching the fiery furnace of the row of houses on the other side. Couldn't stay more than that moment or two. The heat was too intense.

Further north on Boulevard, volunteers with automobiles were helping frantic residents out of their homes and away. Numbers of automobiles were caught by the flames before they could be driven away, and burned.

A little girl, about 12, was crying on the lawn in front of one house. A couple of men stopped and asked if they could do anything. She explained her mother was in the house and she couldn't get out alone and there was no one to move her.

The men went in and found the mother in a bedroom on the second floor. She weighed at least 250 pounds. They dragged her from the bed and down the stairs and out of the house onto the lawn. They had merely gotten out of the house, which was already afire, when the roof fell in. Someone with a car helped put the woman in and drove her away. The two who had saved her life never knew who she was or what became of her.

Dynamiting Homes.

The fire spread all the way to Ponce de Leon and beyond. They stopped it, finally, by dynamiting homes in its path. I crouched behind a mattress across the street from one home when the dynamite went off. It seemed to lift the house, a two-story brick, into the air for 12 feet. The house disintegrated and came down in such ruins it seemed every brick was separate.

That night, after the fire, hundreds of homeless Negroes slept in the open air on what was known as the old circus grounds on Jackson street.

National Guardsmen stood guard to prevent looting and the Army established an emergency food kitchen for the homeless at the auditorium-armory. They made coffee in great 30-gallon cans, loaded them on trucks with baskets of sandwiches and sent them round for the soldiers and police and firemen on duty.

Fire departments from as far away as Macon and Chattanooga sent men and equipment here to help.

Street car traffic was disrupted and many folks were unable to get home from downtown that night, sleeping in the hotels or with generous friends who took them in.

I lived, then, just beyond Little Five Points. Couldn't get transportation home and spent the night with a pal who lived in a downtown apartment.

That same night the fire department, worn and haggard from the struggle, had to answer another alarm which, on an ordinary day would itself have been a big fire.

About six or eight houses on East Hunter street and, I think a

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESBROOK PEGLER.

Congress At Fault NEW YORK, May 24.—"Nobody is going to destroy congress," writes Raymond Clapper from Washington in a rather sharp lecture to the national legislature. "Congress is doing that job itself at the very moment when it is most needed."

Members are so busy sneaking through retirement pensions, grabbing unlimited gasoline rationing, hiding wives, children, nephews and in-laws on the pay roll, that they are missing the boat."

Clapper has more sound political wisdom and a more conscientious and intelligent understanding of the problems of the time than most members of either house. This is not log-rolling. Praise from me or anyone else would do him no material good, because he is judged by what he writes, not by what anyone else writes about him, and by the same token if I were to belittle him he would suffer no loss of professional size.

Therefore, what I have to say on the subject which he has opened up, namely petty and cynical self-interest which tends to impair the faith of the people in their government, is intended as a contribution to the discussion, not as a personal criticism.

I am sure Clapper knows that this greed of which he speaks is not confined to congress in Washington, but, although he once made an expert investigation of nepotism in the house and was to some extent responsible for the defeat of 20 or more candidates for reelection, he has never, to my knowledge, put his finger on the true source of this public disappointment in the high personalities of our government.

It Is Legal Yet, if we are to repudiate this sort of thing, it is not enough to attack nepotism in congress and let it go at that. Jimmy and Elliott Roosevelt are officers on active service in the war now and all honor to them for that, but long before there was any war these two young men, starting from scratch with the first election of their father, quickly leaped into that tax group so heavily despised by the New Deal as being necessarily predatory, which embraces fewer than 50,000 Americans among the entire 130,000,000.

Their sister, Anna, suddenly was too good with genius and, with no professional experience in journalism, became overnight one of the salary-arrangers of the profession or business. Mrs. Roosevelt also developed unsuspected gifts of great commercial value and quickly ran her income up into the realm of diminishing returns.

By the same precedent, a congressman may load the pay rolls with his kin, regardless of the actual worth of their ability and services. Why not?

Big Job On Side Charles Michelson, the publicity man of the Democratic party, got a job at $20,000 a year from a big radio company which had delicate dealings with the communications commission.

A New York bureau of political hue, yet, while drawing this big salary from a private company, he remained a latch-key familiar to the White House.

It was thought to be a small thing when Harold Ickes on two occasions tucked himself away in the Naval hospital, contrary to law, at a rate which would not have paid for a pitcher-and-bowl bedroom in a flophouse, and mention of that was scoffed away as petty political faultfinding.

But the white graft by congress, the $2,600 jobs for the in-laws and nephews, which, as Clapper truly says, has impaired congressional prestige, is all petty stuff, too.

No white graft, no personal exploitation of public office, no assumption of special privilege is petty, however small the amount involved.

It is, for example, the bad effect on the people's respect for office that counts.

Nor is it personal or political hatred which prompts such observations as these. They are prompted by pure political idealism.

Word Stories.

By W. Worthington Wells.

A person who is easily convinced or one who believes everything he is told or reads is said to be CREDULOUS.

CREDULOUS is an adjective pronounced CRED-u-lous with the accent on the first syllable. It is pronounced the same as (cred) in credit. The first (U) is like the "u" in unite and the second like that in circus.

When you refer to the degree of credulousness you use the word credulity. Credulity is a noun pronounced cre-DU-li-ty, the (du) is pronounced like that in duty.

The young are very apt to be credulous, and that is as it should be.

The credulity of some people very nearly approaches stupidity. A credulous person is very likely to be imposed upon because he is likely to believe too readily.

business or two, were destroyed in this comparatively small blaze. Today the area then burned, along Boulevard and Jackson streets, is mostly occupied by apartment buildings, well built and reasonably fireproof. No more shingle roofs. It is doubtful if there could be another experience like that of that May afternoon in 1917. Unless, of course, our enemies should be able to drop explosive and incendiary bombs on the city. Then it would be worse.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

A TREADMILL AND WAR HARVARD UNIVERSITY (By Mail)—Inside the room it was very cold. The thermometer registered a little below zero. There was a bed, blankets. In another room was food. On a treadmill a young man was running. He wore well-oiled, soft-looking boots. From the tops of them protruded heavy woolen stockings.

His pants were of heavy duck. He wore a heavy undershirt. On his head was a knitted cap. Around his face, so that only his eyes showed, was a woolen, knitted piece. The color was brown.

Running in through the belt of his pants was an electric cord. Underneath his clothes were gadgets attached to his back, his chest, his legs. They were connected. At any time it was possible to tell the temperature of those parts of his body.

He was running a good trotting run. His feet slapped down on the moving tread, which was of a thick, heavy canvas material. He ran easily as if he were Boston's famed Clarence De Mar, who has won the marathon seven times.

This young man was going to run for eight hours. The Marathon is over in less than three. He would slow down his run to a fast walk and then pick it up. But he was to be there, running and walking, on the treadmill, for eight long hours.

Only a scientist could stand there, looking at instruments—running, running, running, in the same spot.

When the eight hours was done he would go to bed and sleep. The next day, on other instruments, he would put in eight more hours.

Day by day the temperature would go down. Day after day he would stay there, live there, eat there, run there, sleep there, work there.

Finally, at the end of a month, the temperature would be down to about 40 degrees below zero.

THAT MAN AND YOUR SON Do you see any connection between that young man, running on his treadmill, here at Harvard University, in his fatigue laboratory, and your son or husband or brother or sweetheart in the Army?

Well, there is! A very close one!

If your son or sweetheart or brother or husband gets sent to fight in the Arctic zone he will thank God for that young man running on the treadmill.

A certain dictator would have thanked God, too, had he believed in God and had anyone thought of experiments to see how men could be clothed warmly and yet not too heavily; what foods best sustained them in severe temperature, what portions of their bodies suffered most from cold. So many of his soldiers would not have frozen.

If we get involved in helping Russia, the clothing to be worn in one of Russia's winters will be determined, and modified, by the results coming out of this laboratory here into which so much work has gone.

It looks daffy. It sounds daffy. And that is one of our troubles. We have got so wise and smart that we have come to laugh at college professors and laboratories.

I think it may be the politicians. They always are holding up the college professor to ridicule and charging that he is an impractical person. Well, at stealing the public funds or getting graft of road contracts and pardons, he is a very impractical fellow.

But, this war is being won in the laboratories as much as it is being won anywhere else. The laboratories turned out the radio detectors which saved England and which may save us. The laboratories and the college professors or those trained by college professors, are providing us with the physics, the chemistry and the engineering.

HEAT, TOO There are rooms where heat and its influence are studied. There is a Harvard professor at Wright field where he is giving to the government the information picked up in Harvard's Fatigue Laboratory about the "air bends."

This man was here for this Institute of War Problems given by the Nieman Foundation to 50 newsmen here as their guests. Divers, if brought up from deep depths too quickly, get the bends because of the excess nitrogen, absorbed at deep depths, which gets into the blood in the form of bubbles. It can cause exquisite agony, permanently cripple, or kill.

Pilots, going up swiftly to great heights, get the same thing. They are fighting planes at 30,000 and more feet today.

This Fatigue Laboratory is flying men around now at 45,000 feet. They already know how to treat a man before he goes up to 30,000 feet.

Aren't these colleges crazy things, though?

Aren't college professors funny? No wonder the politicians have so much fun with them.

Imagine a man running on a treadmill for eight hours in temperature below zero.

The politician would say—I can hear him now—"I'd put him out behind a mule and he'd get all the exercise he needed."

That would fetch the crowd. They'd laugh.

But, if winter goes on and we have to fight in Russia or in China or somewhere else where it's cold, your son won't freeze to death as did so many of the sons of German mothers.

Don't you laugh at the young man in the laboratory if you have anyone in the army.

It wouldn't be cricket!

The Watchdog That Saves Our Property Must Expect Abuse for Spoiling Our Sleep

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

A few weeks ago a newspaper in western Canada was fined $300 for trying to prevent another disaster like that at Pearl Harbor. That disaster, and the many similar ones that preceded it, should have taught all men in authority to be alert and watchful. Perhaps they did. But overbur

Possessing no ability as a cartoonist or in any other branch of the pictorial arts—the only recognizable animal I can draw is an elephant, and art critics sometimes can't tell whether it is going or coming because the tail looks like the trunk and vice versa—perhaps I shouldn't raise a carping criticism of cartoonists good enough to make the national magazines.

But I fear that if some archeologist, groping in the ruins of New York or Philadelphia a thousand or so years from now, comes across a Satepost or Colliers he will set down in his notebook that Americans in the 1940's were mostly left-handed.

I have made a study of recent cartoons. They depict cops and criminals carrying revolvers or automatics. Or perhaps a long-legged girl wielding a lipstick. Anyway, they depict something. And almost invariably the gun or the lipstick or the tennis racket is held in the left hand of the hero or villain as the case may be.

One may, with a bit of imagination, understand that. In the cartoon now before me a cop is chasing two convicts. From right to left, which is contrary to the nature of things but maybe the convicts preferred running west. The artist desired to show the cop's gun, else the point of the cartoon would be lost. If he placed it in the cop's right hand it would be cut off by his body. So he had to create a left-handed cop. That seems to happen quite frequently.

No statistics on left-handed folk are available just now, but there must be a number of them. And why not? Nature is supposed to preserve a balance. If that is true right and left-handed folk should run about 50-50.

Being so utterly helpless on my sinister side (that means left, you literate!) I am always fascinated by a southpaw penman, especially of the feminine gender. There is a very attractive one in this shop and it is beguiling to watch her set down figures and write words with her left hand. Whether she is supplied with left-handed pencils I cannot say. But I couldn't do it, with any type of equipment. Still, I suppose, I shouldn't get an inferiority complex. She couldn't write with her right hand, either. That is, I suppose not. If she could, she would. Nothing a woman hates more than being different. Except as to hats.

Lost Ball

This story came to me from an utterly unreliable source but I'm passing it on without indorsement. Hubert Lyons, the RKO man of Film Row, was playing—or making a stab at it—golf. With a Universal film man, which may or not indicate a merger which will rock Hollywood to its foundations, if any.

They encountered what might be called a Georgia hazard—a group of county convicts ahead. Lyons drove his ball spang into their midst, followed it to its stopping place and asked about it. "None of us ain't seen no ball, boss," was the agreed verdict of the tolling public servants. So Lyons, with a groan, dug up another and prepared to shoot.

Couple of holes ahead the Universal man exhibited a fairly new golf ball.

"One of those convicts sold it to me for three cents," he confided.

"Gimme!" cried Lyons. "That's my ball and I paid 75 cents for it."

"Can you prove it?" asked the Universal man. Hubert couldn't.

It must be there was a dishonest man in that group of convicts. I make no comment about the man from Universal.

Believe it or not, a court of justice sometimes exhibits a bit of common horse sense, irrespective of a misplaced comma or a wrong middle initial in an indictment.

This case came before the supreme court of Georgia. It appeared from the record that one James Wilson had been sentenced to the pen for slaying one Clayburn Brash.

The case was appealed on the ground that the dead man was not named Clayburn Brash but Cleveland Brash. Hence, I suppose, no corpus delicti. You couldn't kill a man who didn't exist.

A pretty point for the lawyers. But the supreme court, ignoring pretty points, decided that a certain man named Brash had been slain, that his corpse had been exhibited, that all his neighbors knew him, and that—I'm not quoting the decision now—he was just as dead as if he'd been recorded in the family Bible as John Quincy Brash. He had been shot and he was dead. Proper registration after that would be up to the recording angel. So the conviction stands.

This appears to be a step forward. Far be it from me to tell a court how to run its business. But the records of years show that many a defendant has gone free because the clerk who wrote the indictment put a comma or a semicolon in the wrong place or spelled the culprit's name wrong.

"Why not," asks Chess Howard, "allot Germany an 'A' card for poison gas?"

Fact-Finding Movement Gets Gift of $1,000

Knox Walker Announces Contribution by Coca-Cola

A contribution of $1,000 from the Coca-Cola Company to the Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement was announced yesterday by Knox Walker, May chairman of the movement and past president of the Georgia Education Association.

In making the announcement, Walker said:

"This is the fourth $1,000 gift made by the Coca-Cola Company to the Fact-Finding Movement. We recall with gratitude the company was the first corporate concern to recognize the potentialities of this work for advancement of the state and to assist the endeavor during its first year with a substantial contribution."

The Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement is a co-ordinating agency for the study of Georgia and for stimulating its progress through the democratic process.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

CHURCH ATTENDANCE. Among the topics of conversation at San Antonio last week was the very practical question: What will be the effect of gas and tire rationing upon church attendance?

Pastors of country churches were more concerned than pastors of city churches, since the distance of many members of country churches from their homes to the meeting houses is so much greater than the distance of city folks from their meeting houses; and yet every pastor is mindful of the fact that even city folks will have to consider very carefully the use to which they put their cars.

While at San Antonio I ran into Rev. W. M. Marshall, of La Grange, and he was telling me about his experience a few weeks ago in riding a bicycle from La Grange to Sandersville to attend the regional Sunday school convention. The distance from La Grange to Sandersville is approximately 175 miles, and Dr. Marshall said he made the trip with all ease in two days, spending the night at Macon.

If a preacher can ride a bicycle 175 miles, and come out smiling, we should not be so greatly disturbed about the people getting to church in their immediate communities.

I have a notion that the farmers will be at church just like their fathers before them were at church, with wagons and buggies and saddles galore, and with horses and mules hitched in the church yards just like many of us used to see them. And in the towns and cities the people will walk, ride on street cars and buses, and in some instances, perhaps, use a portion of their gasoline allowance for trips to the meeting houses on Sunday.

One thing is certain—we need to go to church today as never before. There is a strength to be gained in public worship. The Bible declares it, and human experience attests it. George Washington was in his pew every Sunday in days when travel was far more difficult than it is today. He rode horseback, or walked. And in his later years he rode in his carriage. Most of us can get to the church of our choice every Sunday. There's no question about that. And I believe we will. And I know that increased church attendance will mean a strengthening of the morale of our people. We have the same Gospel which our fathers had. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever. We can do all things through Christ Who strengtheneth us. Let us be thankful that we live in a land of freedom of worship. Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together." Hebrews 10:25. Selah.

Doctor Sees No Shortage Of Physicians

Head of Surgical Congress Cites Increase in College Output

Statistics show there is no evident danger of a shortage of physicians in this country, Dr. B. T. Beasley, secretary-treasurer and director general of the Southeastern Surgical Congress, pointed out here yesterday in a statement.

The statement said, in part: "Many medical schools are admitting more students to the freshman classes and decreasing the time for graduating from four years of nine months each to three years by eliminating the three-month vacation period."

"This means medical schools will graduate approximately 10 per cent more doctors in three years than were formerly graduated in four years. The medical schools have, for several years, been producing approximately 5,000 doctors annually, while there are only approximately 3,000 deaths annually in the medical profession."

"According to available statistical data the United States has one physician to 50 per cent more physicians to population at present than any other country. England, France and Germany have a physician population of approximately one physician to 1,500 persons, whereas the United States has one physician to less than 800 population, or 180,000 doctors for 130,000,000 persons."

"The Army requires approximately six doctors for each thousand soldiers, sailors, etc., and the civilian population one doctor to each thousand. If the Army is increased to 6,000,000 men, approximately 40,000 doctors will be required, thus leaving 140,000 doctors to take care of 125,000,000 people or a ratio of one doctor to less than 800 population."

"According to these statistics there is no evident danger of a physician shortage in this country except in certain rural communities. Many rural communities are without doctors at present due to an unequal distribution of physicians."

"Many cities are overcrowded with physicians. In some cities the ratio of physicians to population is as high as one doctor to 400 people. Some provision must be made to redistribute medical manpower now and after the war."

DeKalb County Bond Pledge Tops Million

Inspiring Campaign Gets Average of $142 a Family

If the Axis wants to know what Americans think of America they won't have to go farther than DeKalb county, Georgia. In Atlanta's neighboring county residents promised to buy war bonds until their pocketbooks are empty—more than $1,000,000 during the next year.

War bond workers who called house-to-house during the last two weeks reported yesterday the 7,131 families (or 28,524 individuals) which they contacted promised $142 a family during the next year. That's a total of $1,015,132.

Members of the American Women's Voluntary Society conducted Decatur's canvass, launched two weeks ago by Dorothy Lamour. Mrs. L. L. Tatum led this group. Communities in DeKalb were covered by Miss Tullie Smith and Mrs. Douglas McCarty. AAA committeemen under County Agent E. P. McGee queried farmers about their contributions to the war bond campaign while Negro schoolteachers were led by C. M. Clayton, of the Herring Street school.

Gallup Poll Reveals:

Leaders Favor Stiffer Taxes

By GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 24.—If this year's income tax bill were written by civic and community leaders throughout the country, many millions of families who have not heretofore had to pay an income tax would start paying one.

Under the present law a typical family—a married man with two children—has an exemption of $2,300. Community leaders interviewed by the institute from coast to coast would reduce that exemption to $1,800 a year. They gave three reasons for doing it:

First, they think the brunt of the war cost should be more evenly spread; second, they believe such a step will help check inflation; and third, in their opinion the tremendous revenues needed for war cannot be raised without broadening the tax base.

The income tax issue was approached in two ways during the course of the interviewing. Community leaders were first asked:

"In the case of income taxes would you be in favor of reducing the amount of personal exemptions—that is, broadening the base—so that more people would have to pay income taxes?"

The results were:

Yes _____ 57%
No _____ 41%

Undecided _____ 2%

Next the leaders were asked to state what income a family should have before income taxes are levied on them. The question was:

"At what income level do you think a typical family of four—a married man with two children—should start paying a federal income tax?"

The medium average of all replies was $1,800. About a third, however, would make the program even stiffer and start taxing such a family when its income is $1,500 or less.

If the general public were in charge of writing the tax bill, it would actually broaden the base to a greater extent than the community leaders propose on the average.

The public would levy a small tax on a family of four earning as little as $1,000, a recent Institute survey showed. For a family earning $1,500 a year the public would set the tax at $24; for a family earning $2,000 at $54.

Johnnie gets a week end to visit his folks

THE first week-end at home is a big moment in the life of Private John Jones. His chest swells beneath the admiration of relatives and girl friends.

The army wisely recognizes the fact that Johnnie needs an occasional vacation from the routine of the training camp. Likewise, the workers in war plants get days off for rest and recreation, so they can bring fresh energy to their tasks.

In contrast, the wheels of Georgia's textile industry are turning 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. They have switched from peacetime goods and are working now more and more on war orders. While men and women workers get days and hours of leisure time, the machines run on and on without a pause.

It is estimated that the Government is placing orders or cotton goods for military uses at the rate of about $20,000,000 a month—in Georgia alone. Plants that once turned out tire fabric are now producing duck for tents, tarpaulins, belts and other uses. Millions of yards of cotton fabrics are now being produced by Georgia mills to be converted into clothing, towels and sheets for the army and navy.

Most of the cotton mills in Georgia are on a three-shift basis. Their uninterrupted operation, day in and day out, is made possible by their dependable source of electric power. About 90 per cent of all textile mill requirements for power in Georgia are supplied by the Georgia Power Company. Power plants and textile mills both are working day and night, to make certain there will be no failure in delivering the materials the soldiers and sailors need.

When Johnnie goes home to visit his folks, his summer wardrobe (if he takes it all with him) consists of two cotton khaki shirts, two pairs of cotton khaki trousers, a garrison cap, seven pairs of cotton socks, four cotton undershirts, four pairs of cotton shorts, two pairs of shoes.

The chances are that wherever Johnnie may be, his summer outfit is mostly "made in Georgia."

Train for Victory at Crichton's Business College--Now's the Time

Intensive Training Now In Progress

Government in Need of Business Trained Men and Women.

During war time, government officials recognize the importance of having individuals work where they are most useful. Young people with business training have something more to offer their country than those who have developed no special knowledge or skill. There is an acute need for business-trained men and women in the administrative offices of the government, war industries, military forces and private business. Stenographers and secretaries must write the letters and instructions before the wheels move. Bookkeepers and accountants must keep the records and handle the pay rolls.

Crichton's, Atlanta's only business school fully accredited by the National Association of Accredited Commercial Schools, has for 57 years been training Georgians for the job ahead, and is again equipping men and women with the business training and knowledge to take over the many positions of trust and responsibility that must be filled to win this war. A business course started at once will qualify young people to fill the gaps in the ranks of business in the near future.

Crichton's courses are based upon maximum achievement in minimum time. Advancement is made as rapidly as definite standards are met in each subject. All students progress as rapidly as they themselves can complete the assignments.

Crichton's conducts a successful placement department which helps graduates to secure the most desirable positions with the best opportunities. And all students are entitled to the lifelong service of this department without charge, as all courses carry a life-time scholarship. At present there are more calls for trained help than can be filled.

If trained office workers are in demand, there is no difficulty in getting a position when a civil service examination is passed. The fifth district civil service board, which has been using Crichton's facilities, gratis, for examinations, the past three months, has stated that our government needs typists, stenographers and calculating machine operators now. The Office of Emergency Management has appealed in the newspapers "to Atlanta women who want to help with the war effort—to take a business course at once." Don't delay longer, start to train for victory now at a school properly equipped to offer such training.

To high school graduates and college students who want to spend this summer profitably, to older women whose husbands have gone or are going into service, and to men who have low draft classifications, Crichton's extends an invitation to call, write, or phone for complete information on how they can help to win this war. Crichton's Business College has the complete second floor of the building at Alabama, Pryor and Plaza Way with additional space on the ground floor on Plaza way. The address is Plaza way at Pryor and the phone number is WA. 9341.

Today it is DANGEROUS to be DEAFENED

Even under peacetime conditions it is a grave mistake to place normal intelligence and an enjoyable personality at the mercy of impaired hearing.

Today it is dangerous to be deaf. Warnings signals are for everyone's vital benefit. The ability to hear clearly and distinctly is now more than ever before, an obligation of every hard of hearing person to himself and to his neighbors.

Life Insurance Holds Most Important Place in Our Affairs

Realizing the importance of life insurance during war periods, and the place it holds at all times in the affairs of the country, sales forces of the Northwestern Mutual Life gathered for a conference at the Biltmore hotel last Wednesday under the sponsorship of Luther E. Allen, general agent in Georgia. Assistant director of agencies, L. J. Evans, of the home office, in Milwaukee, was present, and at the close of the session made a most inspiring address.

Attention was drawn to the fact that life insurance men and women throughout the nation are devoting a goodly portion of their time to various patriotic services; most important of which are, in assisting the government in the sale of war bonds and stamps. Emphasis was also placed on the importance of life insurance sales because a greater part of all life insurance premiums today are going into the purchase of these government bonds, not forgetting that the fundamental purpose of life insurance is for the protection of homes, which is, after all, the most important concern of any democracy in that a man is able to capitalize his potential earning power for the benefit of his family.

Other interesting information brought out at the meeting was in connection with the business as it affected Georgia in 1941.

Quoting from reliable sources, it was stated that the $35,500,000 in life insurance money paid to Georgians in 1941 exceeded the $23,674,670 in WPA payments in the state for the fiscal year, was many times the $922,828 in PWA grants, was one and one-half times the Federal Agricultural Adjustment program payments of $22,652,058, and nearly eight times the $4,470,216 in federal payments to the state under the social security act, thus demonstrating the importance of life insurance's contribution to the economic security of the state. Life insurance payments were more than the $29,888,197 in income and excess profits taxes collected in Georgia and were one-fifth the $169,970,000 cash income from farm products. Prize awards were made to various members of the agency during the day. Frank Pruden, of Dalton, received the award for the largest volume of business secured during the contest period. George Venable, of LaGrange, was winner for the largest number of applications secured, and Warner R. Wilson, of Columbus, received an award for the most helpful suggestion made during the meeting.

Super Quality Poultry Feeds Selling Fast

Standard Milling Company Supplying Egg and Poultry Needs.

The increased demand for eggs and poultry products has put an added responsibility on the nation's farmers. Many are meeting the increased food needs by supplying egg, milk and pork production through the efficient utilization of feeds, both manufactured and home grown.

The growing demand for Super Quality Poultry Mash and Standard Dairy and Hog Feeds, manufactured by the Standard Milling Company, is evidence of how feed manufacturers are helping in the war effort. These feeds are economical sources of proteins, minerals and vitamins absolutely essential for efficient production of eggs, poultry, meat and milk. Farmers are fast learning the value of a balanced ration for their poultry and livestock and the careless feeding practices are being avoided by those determined to make the most of their opportunities for patriotic service and profit.

The Standard Milling Company, with mills in Atlanta and Macon, are now exerting every effort to manufacture feed as fast as it is needed. The picture above shows a portion of the finished feed stock in the Atlanta mill, ready for immediate shipment. The mill is still able to ship orders the same day they are received and hopes to continue doing so in spite of the pressure of present business. Customers are requested to anticipate their requirements a few days to avoid possible disappointment due to transportation delays caused by our over-burdened railroads.

In spite of the difficulty of getting some feed ingredients and the increased cost of others, the Standard Milling Company is determined that the quality of the feeds shall not be lowered and that their prices shall be such to enable users to make a profit. The enviable reputation now enjoyed by Super Quality Poultry Mash and Standard Dairy and Hog Feeds is based on the use of the highest quality feed ingredients and their careful blending based on years of practical experience and laboratory research. These feeds are sold by dealers throughout the southeast as well as shipped direct from the mill to consumers in sections not now served by authorized feed dealers. Feed users are urged to write to the Standard Milling Company, 8 Fairlie street, Atlanta, for a copy of their current mill price list and name of their nearest dealer.

A GROUP OF CAB DRIVERS are seen here reading one of the posters displayed at headquarters of the Yellow Cab Company as part of the company's intensive educational program to promote the conservation of gasoline and tires.

Yellow Cab Conservation Program Attracts Attention

The patriotic stand of Atlanta's famous Yellow Cab service has focused nationwide attention upon the thoroughgoing conservation program which has originated here. Recognizing early the urgent need for conserving rubber and gasoline, but at the same time realizing that the taxicab is a vital part of Atlanta's transportation setup, A. G. Hendley, president of Yellow Cab, launched a program to educate both his own personnel and the public.

The first step was internal. Great posters appeared in the building where the drivers check in, posters which emphasized the war need to conserve every part of a taxicab. Simultaneously, small stickers, duplicating these posters were affixed to each taxi windshield so that, throughout the day, each driver would be reminded.

The second set was a thorough co-ordination between the switchboard which answers when you telephone WA. 0200, and the drivers themselves so as to cut down materially the terrific waste entailed in what is known to cab drivers as "deadhead" mileage. Mr. Hendley explains it like this: "We all are keeping in mind the boys who ride the gasoline tankers risking a flaming death at sea, so we can have transportation in our city and other cities. We know that every gallon of gasoline we waste risks the lives of merchant mariners just that much more. So the boys and girls who run this business determined to cut waste gasoline.

"The most logical place was to stop running taxicabs empty. Obviously if a cab can go out to the edge of town with a passenger and bring back another passenger on the return trip—one whole set of "dead" miles is saved. But if another cab has to run out there to bring back that other passenger while the first cab comes back empty—we are using rubber, gas and wearing out the cab itself on a complete round-trip that serves no useful purpose.

"The co-operation between our people is a beautiful thing to watch. In the old days the men were none too careful about check-in at one of the 60 outposts throughout the city. But now, the moment a man drops a fare he hops to the nearest outpost and checks with the dispatching switchboard. This board knows that somewhere within a few blocks of him there is a fare waiting—for the call has come in. And he goes there.

"Now this obviously demands a little waiting by the public. You would have your heart really warmed if you could ride the cabs and see how willingly the people of Atlanta are co-operating. They are rapidly learning to anticipate their taxi needs, and give us a few extra minutes in which to find a cab that need not waste gasoline and rubber getting to the point where the customer is waiting. We are asking them to try and let us have 15 minutes notice and the response is excellent. All 256 of us in the Yellow Cab Company appreciate this co-operation."

The complete program has caught the attention of taxicab concerns in other cities, and recently a number of these have asked permission to duplicate the Atlanta Yellow Cab program, applying it to their city.

Rev. Lonergan Will Observe Silver Jubilee

Solemn High Mass Tomorrow To Celebrate Occasion.

The Rev. William J. Lonergan, pastor of Sacred Heart church and president of Marist College, tomorrow will observe the Silver Jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood.

He will be the celebrant of a solemn high mass at which the Rev. Philip H. Dagneau, principal of Marist, will be the deacon, with the Rev. Philip A. Hanson, pastor of St. Francis Xavier's church, Brunswick, subdeacon. The Rev. Michael A. Collins will be master of ceremonies.

The Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of Savannah-Atlanta, will preside and preach the sermon. Father Lonergan was born in Philadelphia, studied in public and parochial schools and entered Marist Seminary, Washington, D. C., in 1917. He was ordained in 1917 by the late Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, director of the Catholic University of America.

When the pastorate of Sacred Heart was made vacant in the summer of 1941, the importance of Atlanta's position in religious and educational life prompted the selection of Father Lonergan for the post. At 8 o'clock tomorrow night the parishioners and friends of Father Lonergan will give him a reception at the Knights of Columbus Club on Peachtree street. Bishop O'Hara will also be present. The Altar Society and the Chapel Guild of Sacred Heart will act as hostesses.

Macy Offers $12,000,000 In Debentures

Lehman Brothers Heads Group Underwriting Sinking Fund.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. NEW YORK, May 24.—Lehman Brothers is heading an underwriting group which today is making public offering of $12,000,000 of 2-1/2 per cent sinking fund debentures, due May 1, 1952, of R. H. Macy & Company, Inc., at a price of 100 per cent and accrued interest from May 1.

Net proceeds of the issue, amounting to $11,750,000 after expenses, will be used, to the extent that cash funds and cash requirements will permit, toward the discharge of debts, and the balance not so used, if any, will be added to the general working capital of the corporation. Short-term bank loans payable within one year amount to $13,000,000. Of this debt, $5,375,000 is payable within three years and $6,525,000 within five years thereafter.

Consolidated net sales have shown a steady increase in the last three fiscal years, amounting to $135,522,895 in the 52-week period ending January 31, 1941, as compared with $135,323,577 in the preceding 52-week period, and $130,433,686 in the 53 weeks to February 3, 1940. Net income after taxes and minority interests amounted to $2,781,426 in the most recent period, as compared with $4,269,009 in the year before and $3,942,037 in the 1940 fiscal year. It is stated that by reason of application of the "life" (last-in-first-out) method of merchandise inventory, the net income figure for last fiscal year is $2,390,868 lower than it would have been if based on the "cost or market, whichever is lower" retail method of inventory formerly employed.

The department store business of the corporation is conducted at the main New York store, with selling area of 776,000 square feet, a Parkchester branch store of 85,000 square feet and through three wholly owned subsidiary corporations. These are L. Bamberger & Company, with a Newark store of 564,000 square feet; Davidson-Paxon Company with an Atlanta store of 190,000 square feet; the LaSalle & Koch Company with a Toledo store of 195,000 square feet.

New Gas Plans Draw Protest In Washington

Extension of Rationing Sought To Conserve Tire Supply.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(P)—Administration talk of extending gasoline rationing to the whole country brought a protesting outcry from Capitol Hill today.

Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, told reporters that "perhaps the principal source of this trouble is that congress has surrendered too much of its authority to executives who don't understand conditions in the country." Senator Johnson, Democrat, Colorado, asserted that "it will be hard to convince people in the oil producing states that they can't have gasoline."

The War Production Board has ordered the Office of Defense Transportation to prepare plans for nationwide gasoline rationing as a tire conservation measure. Johnson said that persons who advocate gasoline rationing as a means of conserving rubber should remember that tires deteriorate about as fast when unused as when driven moderately. On the other hand, Senator Bone, Democrat, Washington, chairman of the Patents Committee which has spent weeks investigating the problems of synthetic rubber, said that "extension of rationing finds its justification in the saving of tires, and the apprehension of what is to come."

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that government experts have told congress the nation cannot count on guayule plants, chief hope of domestic production, to yield any substantial amount of natural rubber within the next two years.

Rubberless Tires Used in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—(P)—Another type of experimental rubberless tires—steel-rimmed wooden wheels—has been found "satisfactory" by the operator of a fleet of St. Louis newspaper delivery trucks.

Initial tests proved so successful that William Stroh, president of the firm which has the contract for delivering the morning Globe-Democrat, placed an order for 50 sets.

The wooden tires compressed in quarter sections on standard truck wheels and beveled down for a steel rim two inches wide, are fitted with four springs next to the wheel for shock absorbers.

"The tires don't exactly ride like rubber ones," said Severin Prag, superintendent of the Stroh Company, "but for delivery purposes they provide an answer to rubber tire rationing. Steering is much easier and there is no worry about blowouts."

Court To Hear Defense Side In Webb Trial

Women Principals To Testify for Trio Accused of Murder.

NEW YORK, May 24.—(P)—Lean Ell Shonbrun will be the first witness tomorrow as the defense opens its case in the murder trial of Madeline Webb, his sweetheart John D. Cullen and himself.

After he testifies the spotlight will switch to women principals, with Madeline, Mrs. Vera Webb, her mother, and Mrs. Goldie Shonbrun, Ell's mother, taking the stand. Mrs. Webb is expected to tell about her daughter's life back home in Stillwater, Okla.

Jacques Buitenkant, chief defense counsel, said Madeline would deny making any telephone call luring Mrs. Susan Eliza Reich, wealthy Polish refugee, to the Hotel Sutton. Mrs. Reich was robbed and slain in a suite there early last March.

"The defense is concerned with definitely establishing Miss Webb's innocence," Buitenkant said in announcing that Shonbrun would insist that the 28-year-old former model was not in the murder suite or near it at the time of the crime.

The fourth person under indictment, Murray Hirsch, was granted a separate trial and testified for the state. Buitenkant said the defense would call witnesses requiring about a week.

Odd Fellows Will Assemble At Henry Grady

Three-Day Convention Will Mark 99th State Session.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows will hold its state convention at the Henry Grady hotel tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday. It will be the 99th session for the grand lodge of Georgia.

Public exercises are scheduled at the hotel Wednesday morning, with Dr. M. D. Collins, past grand master, presiding. Addresses of welcome will be given by Troy Chastain, chairman of the county commission; Mayor George B. Lyle and Frank C. Bowen, sovereign grand lodge representative. Dr. C. C. Stauffer will offer the invocation. The annual banquet will be held at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday. Opening exercises at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon will be followed by the Canton Patriarchs' militant ceremonial and a banquet at 6 o'clock. A reception and ball for Odd Fellows and Rebekahs will be held tomorrow night.

Business sessions and a joint memorial with Mrs. Nell Hamilton officiating as warden of Rebekah Assembly also are on Wednesday's program.

RAF Hits Akyab, Japs' Burma Port

NEW DELHI, India, May 24.—(P)—A new RAF blow at the Japanese-occupied port of Akyab in Burma was struck yesterday in a low-level attack. Hits were scored on the airport runway and buildings, and a reception and ball for Odd Fellows and Rebekahs will be held tomorrow night.

At Kyaupyu, 60 miles south of Akyab, barracks and store buildings also were bombed, while in northwest Burma Blenheim bombers continued to harass enemy water-borne traffic on the Chindwin river.

A direct hit was made on a pontoon bridge and barges north of Kalewa were machinegunned in the latter sorties.

Furnish your home at a saving through the large selection of worth-while "Household Goods," all at bargain prices, in today's Constitution.

Story of Jap Atrocities Related By Sailor Who Escaped Camp

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 24.—(P)—A story of Japanese brutalities in the Philippines—including atrocities upon American doctors and nurses—was related here today by Samuel Roberts, 26-year-old Navy machinist mate.

He said he saw the bodies of doctors, their clothing removed, their hands chopped off and their ears slashed from their bloody heads. Bodies of nurses, he said, showed signs of worse treatment.

"Bodies of two nurses and four doctors were found in one place," Roberts said, "and they were not pretty sights. It was awful."

Roberts said he was captured by the Japanese soon after the outbreak of the war and placed in a concentration camp but escaped and made his way to engage with American forces in the fighting in the Philippines.

Tortured for Information. While he was in the concentration camp, he said, the Japanese tortured him in an effort to obtain information. "They shoved rice straws under my fingernails and set them on fire. They put glass in my shoes and made me walk around."

"Did you tell them anything?" "They are still trying to know from me."

Roberts enlisted in 1940, Navy authorities here said. He told his story as a naval officer stood by to see that no information of value to the enemy was revealed. The San Antonio told also of seeing his buddy—who had escaped with him from concentration camp—and two other men go to their deaths on a destroyer's bridge as they manned a machinegun in blazing oil on water covering the ship.

"They just stood there firing

This wreath of lilies-of-the-valley surrounding the lovely lady, brings to mind the delicate fragrance of the new perfume mentioned in the accompanying article.

A Traditional Bouquet in New Perfume

It is difficult, well nigh impossible, to describe perfumes and fragrant scents to you. That's because when you read printed words you must call upon your imagination to supply you with an idea of what that word means in a smell. However, you shouldn't have much trouble understanding what the fragrance is I'm talking about today, for every woman's imagination conjures up a vision of love and happiness when lilies of the valley are mentioned. Always this tiny, fragile, waxy lily has been associated with brides, and love, fresh and young.

In the France of happier days

By Winifred Ware.

A girl in love always wore lily of the valley perfume, and no French bride would walk to the altar without the traditional bouquet of these dainty flowers. With the fall of France, lilies of the valley have become exceedingly rare and most American brides are compelled to wear and carry other flowers. But somehow a famous French perfume house had stored up in America some essence of lily of the valley and have just put on the market a perfume, toilet water, dusting powder and talcum embodying the true fragrance of this lovely flower.

The fragrance of these new products is fresh, gentle, and completely flower-like, and the bottles and boxes which package it are festooned with lily sprays, very pretty, indeed. The perfume comes in three sizes: $5, $2.50 and $1. The toilet water comes in two sizes, $1.85 and $1. The dusting powder is $1.00; the talcum, 50 cents. If you'd like to know the name of the maker of this new fragrance and where to get any of the products, write or phone Winifred Ware at Walnut 6565, or write in care of The Constitution, enclosing a self-addressed envelope.

Wife Should Keep Distance With Disapproving In-Laws

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

We are a happy married couple and have a three-year-old son. Our trouble is our in-laws. My family do not like my husband and his family do not like me. My family has not mistreated my husband in any way, as far as I know, but they just do not seem to like him. I cannot understand his family. They are very old-fashioned. My family is not, and I do not know how to treat them. I have tried my best to treat them as I would my own family, but they do not seem to like it. My unmarried sister-in-law tells my husband stories on me, which I overlook and try to get along with her. His mother has told me time after time that secret marriages are not wise. We married that way for neither family approved of the match. My father-in-law has something ugly to say about my family every time my husband and I are with him. I am always treated as the black sheep in all the family gatherings. My husband's business has forced us to move away from the family and they do not seem to care much about us when we visit them. We have half of my husband's sister's house and she is very nice to us. Our mothers will not speak. The only thing I can figure is that my mother-in-law did not approve of my mother letting me have parties and having my friends come to see me before I married. I think it was nice of my mother to let me have my friends, don't you? Could you give me some advice as to how to get along with these two families? Would it be best to leave them out of our lives? We are very happy now and have been except when the families begin visiting us. We have been married for five years.

MRS. M. S. After five years of marriage in this family turmoil, it seems to me that you would be able to see that the ideas of the two groups do not blend. Each family is set in its way and there is no changing them. If I were you I would certainly not let the actions nor the outlook of the two families ruin my married life. You did marry your husband's family. He did not marry yours. To keep the two separated would be the best thing in the world you could do. Knowing that they do not get along, and knowing that a little thing will cause some unhappiness between you and your husband just let them alone. When you want to be with your family, go to see them and let your husband do the same thing. Yes, I think it was very nice of your mother to let you have your friends in to see you while you lived at home. Why don't you continue this little social contact? It is perfectly all right and your mother-in-law has nothing to do with what you do in your home. Your duty is to your husband, to make him happy and rear your child in the right way. Let your in-laws alone and live your own life the way you wish. If possible, try to arrange their visits with you at different times, in order not to cause any unpleasantness. Knowing what the situation would be I see no reason to encourage it.

GIRL MUST LEARN TO FORGET HERSELF

Dear Dixie:

Please tell me some good subjects to talk about on dates and how I can keep from being self-conscious when around a group of boys. SISTER. Find out what interests your dates and make a point of steering the conversation into these channels. If you do not know what the boys like or what interests him, then ask him to tell you about himself and his favorite sports, or ask him if he is keeping up with the baseball leagues, or what his plans are for the summer, and what is his favorite branch of the armed forces. Almost any subject of current interest will be a good opening and then one thing will lead to another. As for being self-conscious, the best thing to do is to forget all about yourself, and remember that there is nothing so unusual for a boy to talk with a girl. Accept him just as another person like yourself and don't think that you will have to assume a different personality just because you are talking to a man.

Perhaps I am wrong (he writes) but I am of the impression that you stated in one of your newspaper articles that there never has been a proved death from hydrophobia in human beings. I enclose a clipping. Dr. —, mentioned in the clipping, is considered one of the foremost pathologists in the state, has a reputation for being very exact in his statements. I always enjoy your common sense articles and agree with most of your teachings but do consider that you are a little too dogmatic occasionally. Your comment and viewpoint on this hydrophobia death should make an interesting item in your column. "Signed" in this fashion: J. W. Whosis. J. W. Whosis (as we shall call him here) writes on a letterhead printed "Dr. J. W. Whosis," with the address in the usual form. Whenever I receive a letter from someone purporting to be a doctor, but not revealing whether he is a dentist, physician or near-doctor, I assume, until I learn otherwise, that the writer is not a physician.

In this instance, however, I found the writer's name in the blue book which is an M.D., after all, and he limits his practice to pediatrics—diseases of children. Just thoughtlessness of him, having his letterhead printed in that ambiguous fashion. Too bad, because it plays into the hands of the humbug who is in his statement. "Signed" without having a legitimate right to use it. Conceding the pathologist who pronounced the death of a child as having occurred from "hydrophobia" (favorite boggy term for rabies) is the foremost in the state or the country, I still remind my friend the pediatrician that the pathologist's conclusion is merely an opinion and that no one has discovered a specific cause of rabies, and hence no one can determine by necropsy or autopsy that rabies has caused the death. The very best any physician or pathologist can do in such a case is to express his opinion—and I take such an opinion only for what it is worth.

Some day this question may be settled, I wish to heaven it could be, for it is a terrible responsibility, but after many years of conscientious consideration of the question I can give no other advice than this: In case of wound by any animal or bird always have medical first aid treatment as soon as possible. Let the doctor administer an immediate prophylactic dose of tetanus (lockjaw) antitoxin, and a second dose, if he thinks it advisable, 5 to 7 days later. Leave entirely to the doctor's judgment any and all other treatment.

Hollywood Will Produce Better Shorts To Replace Double Feature Programs

By Harold Heffernan.

HOLLYWOOD, May 24.—By September 1, at the latest, every theater in the land will have forsaken double features—that is with the possible exception of a scattered few Main street shooting galleries displaying old products. You can watch now for that familiar old marquee sign: "Plus Selected Short Subjects," because comedies, news reels and travelogs must be utilized to round out a complete two-hour theater program—as in the very much better movie days prior to 1930. This sudden demand for shorts poses a tough problem for Hollywood, which, with no market, has been stuffing off the one-reel business for years. Most consistently good cartoons produced today are the "Merrie Melodies" from the Schlessinger laboratories. Inspired by their recently-acquired importance, short subject makers got together a few days ago and decided to press preview some 15 reels of variegated material being made ready for fall release. They shouldn't have done this. On the whole, the shorts were unfunny, uninspired and boring—and demonstrated to what dismal depths the short subject field has fallen in the past dozen years. But Hollywood can and will turn the trick once it concentrates on the problem. Look for such gagsters as Laurel and Hardy, Harry Langdon and many other old favorites—possibly Charlie Chaplin—to quit the feature field for shorts. There is even talk of Wally Beery going into a series of two-reelers, with Marjorie Main as his team mate. Anyway, shorts of every type are definitely headed for a renaissance—and in a few weeks maybe you'll be able to quit a theater without staggering into the drugstore for a shot of aspirin. A tiny brunet named Donna Drake got her first break as heroine of "The Turtles of Tahiti." She also caught a severe cold on a drafty stage and went to the hospital suffering from pneumonia. Donna would like to have RKO pay her hospital bill and is threatening suit. This is not recommended as a sure-fire method of carving out a Hollywood career.

Unlike most feminine stars, Ann Sheridan has no frets about permanent waves and other hair-care worries are just the opposite—the Sheridan hair is too curly. More than one shampoo a week and its natural waves get completely out of control. Terrifying, isn't it?

Dr. Ameche is going into "White Collar Girl" and has just signed a new contract at 20th Century-Fox. If Mr. Ameche did not have such a large family, he would like nothing better than to stock up on 20 fine race horses and travel from track to track. "But you can't make a dime out of the racket, and you can very easily lose your shirt," said Don recently, after selling the stable he quartered at Santa Anita. "On top of that you find yourself getting too sentimental over your own nags. Whenever they run you feel you've got to have a couple of hundred on the nose or you're letting the animal down. It finally got me—and now I'm out of it for good."

For singing a few bars of "Tipperary" in "Random Harvest" MGM must pay a royalty of $600. In the same picture, Greer Garson sings the famous Harry Lauder number, "She's My Daisy." Mr. Lauder collects $4,000 for that one.

After looking at early gate returns on "My Gal Sal," the chances are 1,000 to 1 that Darryl Zanuck would give the north, south and middle wings of his handsome administration building, also the north lot, for a couple of more pictures with Rita Hayworth. He'd like to buy her contract outright from Columbia—which is silly even to contemplate.

MY DAY: Articles To Meet War Restrictions

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Friday.—Mr. Eric Gugler called for me at 9:30 o'clock this morning in New York city and, with shame I admit, for the first time I visited the sub-treasury building on Wall Street. A group of people have been interested in seeing the very beautiful rotunda restored and made a fitting place where ceremonies of different kinds can be carried on. At present, it is used by the passport service and it is difficult to visualize how beautiful it will be when the partitions are taken out. The detail around the doors, the old iron grill work of the balcony, the beautiful pillars and really perfect proportions make it a most beautiful and dignified hall.

Later in the evening I went to see an exhibition of articles which have been made by manufacturers from materials not required for war purposes. It is astounding what ingenuity has been shown in the development of things which have been made almost entirely out of metal and are now made in plastics and wood. Some of the blankets are being produced with a minimum of wool. They look delightful and when the winter comes we shall know whether they are as warm as "all wool."

Of course, for years the Chinese have been using cotton quilted coats for winter, and China has a cold climate! I also saw some curtains which can be sponged off, and yet look like chintz as they hang in the window.

I discovered we are not really being asked to do anything quite as drastic as I thought at the airport at the airport. On Wednesday, when I announced at the airport that I was taking my last flight, the officials looked at me with horror. They said that because so much publicity had been given, they had very little travel between New York city and Washington and were flying with empty seats on every trip. They really want the public to understand that when tickets are needed they must be given up, but ordinarily reservations can be held.

When I inquired about train travel, I was told that so long as accommodations were available, they would be glad to have them used. They only want people to accept cheerfully a certain amount of uncertainty. If people have to travel by coach, or sit up at night, they hope it will be accepted with a smile. They did ask that weekends be left free by the general public, so that service people could travel in greater comfort.

Your Mirror Beats Friends For Telling the Truth

By Ida Jean Kain.

Some men are cowards in their domestic life. When the little woman, who weighed a mere 116 pounds at the time they were married, slips over into the "plump" class, her husband may not like it in the least. But he can't bear to say so.

If she comes out and asks him for the honest truth, he will lie so convincingly about liking her just the way she is that she almost feels she is doing him a favor by putting up with his weight. He may eventually walk out on her, but he will never "hurt her" by telling her how much he hates having her turn into a fat lady.

It is true that there are some men who seem to like women on the curvesome order. But even with them there is a strict limit to what is pleasing. Take the little woman of five feet two. She has curves at around 116 pounds but at 130 she is unmistakably stout. The difference is a matter of 10 to 15 pounds—mostly around the waist, over the hips and under the chin.

Apparently, it is very hard for a woman to see that she is getting fat. There may be a sneaking suspicion of it in the back of her mind, but she doesn't want that suspicion confirmed, she wants it denied. What she needs is a firm friend to tell her the truth. But what friend would do that?

To be honest, I can't do it myself when I'm asked face to face. Every time I encounter that pleading look in a stout lady's eye I find myself trying to give her the assurance I know she wants.

At this safe distance, however, I can speak my piece. Any of you who have gained more than 12 pounds above the figure that is normal for your structure should think seriously about going on a diet to reduce.

Or, it may be that you haven't gained too much weight and have still lost your girlish figure. The test of this is the size dress you

"Yes, he was my baby...
but what a fight he made!"

Don't ask us how we got this story—just take our word for it that it's true.

During the summer months he roughed it at a boys' camp. After his chores at the camp were done, he piled in a little 12-foot sailing boat and sailed—hour after hour—day after day.

During his last year at college in 1939, a stranger made a little talk about the United States Navy. He suggested that those who were interested might take an examination that would give him a short course at one of our naval schools. Out of 200 boys, he and 7 others were selected. He graduated last June. Just 20 years old. What a fine picture he made when he was handed his commission.

Then followed several weeks at one of our navy yards. His letters were read and re-read by his doting Georgia parents.

Then he left. Days and weeks passed before he was heard from. Then came several letters that had been held up. Yes, he was well—happy—proud to be a part of our front defense lines far out in the Pacific.

Then came the shock—that day when the cowardly group of small, squatty, hissing-through-the-teeth men started to murder 3,000 American citizens in Pearl Harbor.

Far out in the Pacific, an ocean twice the size of the Atlantic, in an area of 3,000,000 square miles, her "baby" was directing a group of tough young men who fought off attack after attack. Her baby hasn't been heard from now for many weeks. He is out there either fighting or buried in a watery cemetery lot that will never have a headstone.

Many men and women in Georgia also have babies in the service. Each day they fearfully await the postman's whistle. Nervously they open a telegram.

Those of us who are here, behind the lines, can do three things that will shorten the days our "babies" are away. 1st. Put every nickel, dime and dollar we can save in U. S. War Bonds and Stamps. 2nd. Pay our taxes with a smile. 3rd. Make every day one of greater and better production.

And let's all offer a little prayer each night for our "babies."
